While Candidate's Views Differ, Campaign Lacks Controversy

by James Giese

Next Tuesday, November 6, is the date for Greenbelt's 36th city council election. Residents will choose up to five names from a list of seven candidates to serve for the next two years on the five-member Greenbelt City Council. Write-in votes are permitted.

The five candidates receiving the most votes will be elected. A run-off election is only possible if three or more candidates receive less than 40 percent of the vote cast. There has not been a run off election since 1965.

Barring a run-off election, the newly elected councilmembers will take their oaths of office on Monday, November 12 at 7 p.m., an hour earlier than the normal council meeting time. The council's first duty following the members taking office will be to elect the next term's mayor. By charter the mayor is one of the five members of council and can be elected by a council majority. By long-standing tradition, council selects as its mayor the councilmember who received the most votes at the city-wide election. This is not, however, a legal requirement.

A mayor pro tem, who serves as mayor in the absence of the mayor, is also selected by council. Again, by tradition, that person is the member receiving the second greatest number of votes.

Greenbelt has a council-manager government. The city manager, a professional in the field of public management, is the city's chief administrative officer and has been appointed by the council. City managers are appointed for indefinite terms by majority vote of the entire council and serve at the pleasure of council.

Candidates

This year seven candidates are vying for the five seats. All incumbent members of council are seeking reelection: Judith F. Davis, Rodney M. Roberts, Edward V. J. Putens, Konrad E. Herling, and Leta M. Mach. Two challengers Kelly P. Ivy, Sr. and Ruth Kastner seek to replace someone on council.

As election campaigns go, this one has been typical of those in recent times. While each candidate has staked out individual positions and indicated differing goals for their term in office, little controversy has developed over issues.

At the two candidates nights preceding the writing of this article, the candidates treated each other with courtesy and respect, unlike the nasty name-calling now taking place in a Fairfax

Roosevelt's Wind Ensemble Selected for Festival in China

by Vicki Kriz

This school year, students of the Eleanor Roosevelt High School Wind Ensemble are not only learning to perfect their musical ability, they are also developing a talent for salesmanship as the students of this select band raise funds for their expected June trip to China.

The ERHS band, directed by Sally Wagner for the past 27 years, is fervently working to raise $4,000 per person for the trip that would be an exciting precursor to the summer Olympics in Beijing.

The ensemble was invited to play in China as a part of a pre-Olympic traveling band festival in three Chinese cities: Beijing, Shanghai, and Xi'an. Kingsway International, a Colorado-based organization that has organized many other performance festivals, appointed John Wakefield, University of Maryland band director and department head for 40 years before retiring in 2005, to select musical groups from the Washington, D.C. area. He will act as conductor when the festival culminates in a mass band performance in the Forbidden City at the heart of Beijing.

"I only invited outstanding groups," Wakefield said: i.e., the ERHS band, Oxon Hill High School band and a band from Hampton Roads Academy in Newport News, Va.

A band from California's Palos Verdes Estate High School will accompany the Washington area group because the band is unable to attend the trip on the dates for bands selected from the West Coast.

Seven Council Candidates Vie for Slots in Election

by Mary Moien

Again this year, there will be a real election for the Greenbelt City Council. On Tuesday, November 6 over 10,000 registered voters of Greenbelt will have the opportunity to go to the polls to elect all five members of the Greenbelt City Council.

On the campaign trail are all five incumbents – long-timers Judith F. Davis, Rodney M. Roberts and Edward V.J. Putens and relative newcomers Leta M. Mach and Konrad E. Herling. Added to the mix are Kelly Ivy and Ruth Kastner. Both have unsuccessfully sought council seats in the past.

No referendum issues are on this year's ballot. However, as in previous years, voters will be able to complete questionnaires pertaining to city services. (See page 7.)

Eligible to vote in the city's four precincts will be 10,680 residents. The 2005 election had the lowest turnout – 18.4 percent – of any municipal election in more than a decade. The highest voter turnout in recent history was 25.1 percent in 1995. Not even the referendum on collective bargaining for city police increased voting in the last election.

Contributing to the low turnouts over recent years were the dismal numbers of persons voting in Springhill Lake's Precinct 8 (just 2.7 percent of the 2,278 voters registered in the precinct in 2005) and the fact that city elections, which are held in off-presidential years, usually produce lower voter registration and turnouts.

Absentee Voting

There are no longer restrictions on asking for an absentee ballot. Any registered voter can vote absentee. Ballots must be applied for by Monday noon. See complete story on page 2.

Signs

Under voluntary sign restrictions that were agreed to in 1991, candidates are encouraged to display small signs on wooden poles constructed and placed at public locations by the city. Signs are currently posted at nine public locations. Ivy, citing that it was traditional to place signs in yards, is not participating in the voluntary process. Kastner is participating and her signs have joined those of the incumbents.

Voter Statistics

At the close of voter registration this year 10,680 city residents are eligible to vote in next Tuesday's election, a decrease of 5.9 percent from 2005. Greenbelt East's Precinct 13, with its 4,052 eligible voters, is the largest of the city's four precincts (as measured by registered persons).

Second largest, with 2,592 registered voters, is Center's Precinct 3. These are followed by the 2,105 in North End's Precinct 6 and 1,931 in Springhill Lake's Precinct 8.

All precincts have a decreased voter registration from 2005. Not surprisingly, Precinct 8 (Springhill Lake) had the largest decrease – over 15 percent. All other precincts decreased substantially less.

The Prince George's County board of elections commented that substantial purges

THANKS

A hearty “Thank You!” for the professional delivery of the News Review. The way you packed our copies inside a plastic bag – within another plastic bag. Professionalism! You kept our issues neat and legibly dry, despite the drought-breaking, welcome heavy rains.

Because of this weekend’s Utopia Film Festival 2007, the latest News Review is especially important. Another “Thank You!” for the directory of movie showings, titles, times and locations.

Christopher K. Scherer

Note: The News Review does not provide plastic bags to its carriers. Mr. Scherer is fortunate to have a carrier who goes the extra mile.

THANKS

Thank you for supporting the National Alzheimer’s walk.

I was encouraged to participate in the Alzheimer’s Walk by a good friend of mine who had lost her mother-in-law to the disease. My goal was to raise $200. My fundraising efforts took me to Safeway, Greenbelt Co-op, University of Maryland University College and to friends and family. I would like to thank all of the people who so generously supported my effort. I took part in the walk on Saturday, October 27 and really was amazed at how many people braved the elements to be there. I was able to raise $300 toward finding a cure to end Alzheimer’s.

Thank you to all for your support.

Bernie Gormally

THANKS

A big thank you to all the people who had anything to do with putting on the Utopia Film Festival. Your Herculean efforts paid off! What a rich and wonderful experience you gave us. The only complaints I have heard were from people who weren’t able to see all the movies that they wanted to see.

Is there any way that the two “Labor Heroines” movies could be shown at the Old Greenbelt Theatre over Labor Day in 2008? Mother Jones gave a great perspective of the plight of miners in the early 20th century and “Made in L.A.” made it clear that many people are still struggling for the right to earn a decent wage and are still not treated with the dignity and respect that their labor deserves. These movies could be an added reminder of what Labor Day commemorates and honors.

“Subdivided: Isolation and Community in America” is another movie that warrants more exposure in Greenbelt, as it emphasizes what being a community is all about.

By picking out these three movies I in no way mean to slight the other offerings, most of which I was not able to see. Thank you Utopia Film Festival Committee for giving us such a feast!

Sylvia J. Lewis

Anyone Can Vote Absentee

by Mary Moien

Although it’s only a few days to the election, it is not too late to vote by absentee ballot. Registered voters can come to the city offices during office hours until noon on Monday to pick up an absentee ballot. They can vote right then if they wish or can take the ballot home and bring it back by 6 p.m. on election day, November 6.

There is no longer a need to state that one is ill or will be out of town on election day. To increase voter turnout any registered voter can vote absentee. If a voter does not want to stand in line or wants to have more time to decide who to vote for, he or she can pick up a ballot on Monday morning and take all day to decide. For those who may not feel comfortable with electronic voting machines, the absentee ballots are paper ballots.

History

For many years Greenbelt had a separate registration process for voting in municipal elections. Then in 1991, the Universal Registration law required the city registration process to be merged with registration for the presidential and congressional elections.

Since that time, the percent of registered voters who actually voted in the city election has taken a precipitous slide. In 1989, before the change, 65 percent of city-registered voters turned out. By 2003, using the expanded rolls, less than 20 percent voted. The change in absentee voting rules for the next election did not reverse the slide. In 2005 only 18 percent voted – a new low.

Any last minute questions can be directed to the city clerk at 301-474-8000.

MVA Offers New Driver Tutorial

The Maryland Motor Vehicle Administration (MVA) has launched an interactive Maryland Drivers Test Tutorial online to help new drivers prepare for the written law test all drivers must pass to get a license.

The program, located at the MVA website www.marylandmva.com, is designed as a practice guide for anyone preparing for a learner’s permit. Those who take the tutorial have a choice of taking an untimed version or a 15-minute timed version simulating the actual timed test. The online tutorial poses a series of 20 randomly selected questions with multiple-choice answers. The tutorial indicates immediately whether or not the correct answer was selected for those taking the untimed version and indicates where the correct answer can be found in the Maryland Driver’s Handbook. A summary of correct answers is shown at the end for those taking the timed version.

H.S. Choirs Perform

Native Plants Save Money

Native plants have been growing and evolving in this area for thousands of years and, as a result, have adapted to local soils and climate. As a result they are more likely to thrive with minimal care, unlike exotic plants. That can mean less need for water, fertilizer and pesticides. Additional info on green landscaping techniques can be found at <http://www.epa.gov/reg3esd1/garden/>. Information on local native plants can be found at www.mdflora.org, the website of the Maryland Native Plant Society.

"Greek Wedding" Is Free Senior Movie

On Tuesday, November 6 at 1 p.m., the monthly senior movie will be shown in the Senior Lounge at the Greenbelt Community Center. Although the monthly movies are designated for seniors, all ages are welcome to join this free program.
The November movie will be "My Big Fat Greek Wedding" (2002, directed by Tom Hanks), starring Tola Portakalos (Nia Vardalos) who feels trapped in her large Greek family, where women are expected to do only three things: "marry Greek men, have Greek babies and feed everyone until the day they die." Rebelling against this fate, Tola quits the family restaurant, goes to college, fixes her hair and falls in love with Ian (John Corbett), a guy who is way-too-good-to-be-true and not Greek.

This horrifies Tola's Greek culture-crazed father (Michael Constantine) and sets off a major culture clash between her loud, eccentric family and Ian's subdued, over-civilized Anglo-Saxon parents. Based on Vardalos' own autobiographical one-woman play, "My Big Fat Greek Wedding" is a romantic comedy that trusts its simple, human story and does not resort to Hollywood sentimentality. It is filled with big, fat, crowd-pleasing laughs, making it a wedding most worth attending. For further information call 301-397-2208.

Explorations to Visit Geography of Disease

Basic ideas of the paper include life-cycle of mosquitoes, importance of hydrology and malaria imported from Latin America.

His presentation will also examine other items, such as wave mechanics and diseases, plague pandemics and presence of plague in the United States, geographic distribution of malaria by infective species of the pathogen and the role of air transportation in the dissemination of insects and pathogens, which were not included in his final paper.

The third of eight children, Sabol is a first-generation college graduate, earning a B.S. in Meteorology and an M.S. with a major in meteorology and minor in mathematics from the University of Utah. After his retirement Sabol earned a second master's degree through the State of Maryland Golden Age ID Card Program at UMCP.

Whenever we feel lonely, when we feel no one cares, when we need someone to rely on, when no one has time for us, we should always remember God. # City Candidates Gather to Address Roosevelt Merchants Association

by Brian St. George

On October 29 in the council chambers of the Municipal Building all the candidates for city council, except Ed Putens, who was called out of town on business, responded to five questions generated by the Roosevelt Center Merchants Association (RCMA). There were about 20 Greenbelters in attendance. Kim Kash, president of the association, opened the meeting and read each question aloud. The candidates were given three minutes to answer each question.

Question 1: "The original part of Roosevelt Center is held by an absentee owner. Given the importance of the Center to the surrounding community, could you envision the city helping to start a development corporation and/or Revenue Authority to reclaim local ownership of the center or have the city purchase the center and hire outside management?"

Rodney Roberts, the first responder, suggested that George Christakos, the landlord who owns parts of the Center, should be treated with respect as "we would anyone else." He indicated the city does not have funds to purchase the center and that local merchants might want to consider buying their own units. He suggested moving the city's planning and zoning departments from the Community Center into Roosevelt Center to increase the number of full-time tenants.

Ruth Kastner was up next. She saw a lack of communication between city, tenants and Christakos and said that everyone would be better off if "people here own it."

Kelly Ivy, after a conversation with Christakos in Greek, said that "Mr. Christakos is a businessman and if he makes improvements he's going to raise the rent." Ivy said a cultural arts center would draw more people into Roosevelt Center.

Judith Davis was not for the city buying the Center. It could cost an estimated $1.5 million and additional staffing would be a great financial burden.

Leta Mach also saw purchasing the Center as too expensive but she was in favor of a public/private marketing focus such as a historic main street program. She said the city is not in the business of telling tenants they are or are not appropriate for the Center.

Konrad Herling said he proposed a Economic Development Corporation in 1989 to Council and that Christakos is only one of four different developers involved with Roosevelt Center. Several years ago, he said, a another developer struck a deal with Christakos to buy him out but they could not get city approval and no deal was reached.

Question 2: "What would make the Roosevelt Center's environment a more pleasant place for shoppers, residents, and senior citizens? How would you make those changes?"

Roberts indicated a regular police presence is necessary.

Kastner agreed a more regular police presence, one that does not "fade away," would eliminate some behavioral issues. She also felt that having some small space for the homeless would take them out of the Center.

Ivy said he didn't have a problem telling rude individuals in the Center – there were probably only one or two "bad ones" – to move on.

Davis said the Center is well maintained by a public works employee on a daily basis. She added that the city could enforce the bike and skateboard code, especially with adults; add bike racks, an information kiosk, street banners and hold the merchants responsible to keep their windows clean and looking good.

Mach agreed that security is a subjective thing. She also advocated a stronger police presence or possibly a park ranger.

Herling wanted more programming to augment the merchant operations, with an overarching authority to create "marketing, security, lighting and programming

George Patton in North Africa and Sicily, and under General Mark Clark in Italy. He served along with three brothers during the war. He was honorably discharged from the service as a Master Sergeant in August 1945.

He married Pearl Marie Hazelton of Annapolis Junction on March 30, 1942, during the war, prior to shipping overseas. The wedding was delayed a day as a result of the March 29 Palm Sunday 22 inch snowstorm, a date still recognized as one of the top five snow storms in the Baltimore area.

After the war he was employed as a budget analyst for several agencies within the Department of Defense and retired from the Defense Supply Agency in 1976 after a total of 35 years of federal service.

He was brother to the late Donald Keeney, long time owner of Keeney's Music Store on West Street in Annapolis. Music played an important part of his life, playing the trumpet semi-professionally for several years and singing in church choirs in Greenbelt and Berwyn for over 50 years. In his younger years he also enjoyed square dancing, softball and bowling. Mr. Keeney also enjoyed many family gatherings and vacation trips over the years including participating in a family badminton game as recently as September. He lived for 55 years on Lakeside Drive and was an active member of Greenbelt Community Church.

In addition to Pearl, his wife of 65 years, Mr. Keeney is survived by two daughters, Theresa Mae Romanek of Jefferson, Md.; Kendra Lynn Hurt of Arnold; his brother Wilbur Keeney of Pinecrest, Fla.; four grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Funeral services were held at Woods Memorial Presbyterian Church in Severna Park on October 30, followed by interment at Crownsville Veterans Cemetery in Millersville, Md.

Rodney M. Roberts

Rodney M. Roberts, 49 years old, is a life-long Greenbelt resident. He attended Greenbelt schools and was active in sports with the Greenbelt Boys and Girls Club. Roberts is the sole proprietor of a small business that specializes in on-site repairs of various types of equipment and vehicles.

Roberts is serving his eighth term on council; the last three terms as Mayor Pro Tem. He attended nearly every council meeting during the four years prior to his being elected to the Greenbelt City Council in 1991, becoming known as an outspoken community activist. During his 16 years on council, Roberts has only missed one council meeting (a work session). In 1991, Roberts proposed and worked through to implementation community policing and police bicycle patrols. Since then, he has worked to increase bike patrols throughout the city. Roberts was a leader in the citizen movement that resulted in the city's acquisition of 184 acres of woodland, part of the original green belt. Roberts continued to advocate for long-term protection of our city-owned forests. This resulted in the 2003 passage of a city ordinance establishing a Greenbelt Forest Preserve consisting initially of 225 acres. Roberts often testifies on behalf of the city before state and county officials concerning development, transportation, recreational, environmental and fiscal issues. In 2004 he testified before the State Board of Public Works (consisting of the comptroller, governor and treasurer). Overcoming initial opposition from Comptroller William D. Schaefer and Governor Erhlich, he secured $648,000 in Open Space Funds for the purchase of 10 acres known as the "Sunrise Property" in Greenbelt East – now one of the city's newest forest preserves. Roberts has consistently opposed yearly city tax increases for nonessential hiring and other items.

Roberts has enjoyed volunteering his practical skills to groups such as Greenbelt Volunteer Exchange Service (GIVES) and New Deal Café, among others. Roberts served as a member of the Metro Area Sector Planning Group. He is a member of the Council of Governments Transportation Planning Board, City Council Liaison to the Youth Advisory Board and Arts Advisory Board. Roberts is a member and former chair of the Committee to Save the Green Belt and a founding member of the Greenbelt Foundation for the Arts.

Biographies of Candidates

The biographies of the city council candidates are reprinted below in reverse alphabetical order. Each submission was prepared by the candidate.

Edward V. J. Putens

Currently a member of the Greenbelt City Council, Edward Putens is the first person to file as a candidate for the forthcoming city council election. As is his habit Putens filed first in '05, '03 and '01. His nomination papers have been certified by City Clerk Kathleen Gallagher for sufficient signatures. Mayor Judith Davis has also filed for re-election and her nomination papers have been certified by Gallagher.

Putens is completing his 13th term on the Greenbelt City Council. He has been a resident of Greenbelt for 40 years, living in Springhill Lake, Charlestown North, Windsor Green and recently in Greenbrook. He was born in Hazelton, Pa., and grew up in Baltimore.

Putens has been employed by the Federal Government for 35 years and has received many awards and commendations. For the past 20 years he has worked for the Food and Drug Administration. Putens previously served in a variety of senior management and staff positions for the Department of Labor, Office of Personnel Management and U.S. Postal Service.

Putens has taken a leading role to improve police protection and crime prevention. He has for many years advocated the revitalization of Springhill Lake and other property west of Kenilworth Avenue, in part to improve public safety. The council earlier supported his initiative to use video cameras in strategic areas in the city and to place two School Resource Officers in Greenbelt schools for security. He previously led the successful efforts to have a traffic light installed at Greenbelt and Mandan Roads and a guardrail installed at Eleanor Roosevelt High School.

He proposed the City's new Public Safety Advisory Committee, as well as the Advisory Committee on Education (ACE). Putens also successfully initiated the Four Cities Coalition among Greenbelt, College Park, New Carrollton and Berwyn Heights to expand inter-city cooperation on issues and projects of common concern. Putens has taken a leading role on senior citizen concerns and initiated a Senior Task Force, which led to establishment of the permanent Senior Citizen Advisory Committee.

Until 1993, Putens was the only councilmember living in Greenbelt East and he has worked actively with the Greenbelt East Advisory Committee (GEAC), which he co-founded. He was an original member of the Windsor Green Board of Directors and served on its board for eight years. He is currently a member of the Greenbrook Estates Board of Directors.

Prior to his council service, Putens was chairman of the Community Relations Advisory Board, which developed the proposal to establish a city-wide crime prevention program and led eventually to the current Public Safety Advisory Committee. He has been active at different times in a variety of community organizations, including Greenbelt Consumer Co-op, Friends of the Greenbelt Museum, Greenbelt Arts Center and the Eleanor and Franklin Roosevelt Democratic Club. He was an active participant in the Greenbelt Boys and Girls Club programs when his two children were young.

While on the city council, Putens has served on numerous county, state and national committees to represent Greenbelt's interests. He is the past chair of the Small Cities Council of the National League of Cities and has also served on numerous other committees. He is also a member of the regional Washington Metropolitan Council of Governments (COG), Prince George's County Municipal Association and the Maryland Municipal League. He currently serves on the COG Human Resources and Public Safety Policy Committee, which he previously chaired and was a member of it's Transportation Planning Board.

Putens is a graduate of the University of Maryland, where he earned his degree in microbiology, and was a member of the university's lacrosse team. While attending college, he was employed in various research capacities for medical and research development companies and co-authored several patents dealing with minimizing air pollutants.

Leta Mach

Leta Mach is now completing her second term. Since the last election, she has earned a designation as a Fellow of the Academy for Excellence in Local Government established by the Institute for Government Service.

Mach has represented the city on numerous local, state and national committees, including the Maryland Municipal League Communications Committee, the National League of Cities Human Development Steering Committee and the board of Clean Air Partners. She is also Maryland vice chair for the Metropolitan Washington Air Quality Committee and secretary of the Prince George's Elected Municipal Women. In addition, she served on the steering committee that established the National Agricultural Research Alliance-Beltsville to help support the mission of the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center.

In 2000, Mach was honored as Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizen. This recognition followed years of community service in a variety of positions with many different community organizations.

She first became involved in Greenbelt when her children joined the Greenbelt Cooperative Nursery School. She became a member of the cooperative's board of directors as chair of the Housekeeping and Bylaw Revision Committees and treasurer. Later she served as president of the PTA at both Greenbelt Elementary School and Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS). After her children graduated, she continued to be involved in the school and served on the Eleanor Roosevelt Community of Schools Community Advisory Board.

In 1995 when the city council established the Advisory Committee on Education (ACE), Mach was appointed to the committee and elected chair by its members. Until her election to the city council in 2003, she continued to serve as chair of ACE, helping to guide the development of programs to benefit Greenbelt's schools.

Because of her interest in communications and writing, she volunteered to help at the News Review soon after moving to Greenbelt. She served as a reporter, editor and proofreader for many years. In 1979 she joined the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival Committee as vice president of facilities. The next year she became publicity chair and continued in that position or as assistant until 1992.

Mach's work experience also reflects her dual interests in communications and education. From 1969-73, she taught Early Western Civilization, Modern European History, Asian Area Studies and Soviet Area Studies at Suitland Senior High School. From 1981-87, she was the Information Specialist at Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI). She was responsible for media releases, brochures, hotline messages, advertisements, audio-visual materials, a newsletter, annual reports, corporation minutes and monthly information and educational programs.

During this period, she served on a committee for the formation of the Greenbelt Museum, where she later volunteered as a docent. For Greenbelt's 50th anniversary, she chaired the Greenbelt Oral History Committee that collected video oral histories. She also participated in the book project by writing chapter two of "Greenbelt: History of a New Town."

From 1987-2003, she worked at the National Cooperative Business Association as director of communications and cooperative education. Today, she runs her own communications business as well as being an independent skin care consultant.

Her other cooperative service includes chair of the GHI Audit Committee from 1988-89 and secretary of the board of the Greenbelt Consumer Cooperative from 1993 to 2003. Beyond Greenbelt, she is president of Parent Cooperative Preschools International and 2008 Institute chair for the Cooperative Communicators Association, the only national professional association for communicators working in cooperatives. In 2002, she was honored with that association's highest award, the H.E. Klinefelter award. In 1995, she received the national Co-op Month Award for Communications.

Mach grew up in a military family that was stationed overseas and in several U.S. states. While she was in high school her father was stationed in Washington, D.C., and she graduated from a Prince George's County school – Bladensburg. Mach attended Michigan State University, where she met her husband. In 1969, she received a B.A. with honor with a major in history and minors in English and education.

Mach and her husband, Darrell, moved to Greenbelt in 1974. They have two married children – Ryan and Amy and three granddaughters.

Ruth Kastner

Ruth Kastner has lived in Greenbelt since the age of four. As co-chair of the Committee to Save the Green Belt, together with Paul Downs, she led a petition drive in 1987 to acquire key portions of the last remaining woodlands for which Greenbelt was named.

Kastner is currently serving as president of the Boxwood Civic Association and recently served on the Forest Preserve Task Force, working with a diverse group of citizens to draft Management and Maintenance Guidelines for Greenbelt's new forest preserve. Before deciding to run for city council this year, she reapplied to be a member of the permanent Forest Preserve Advisory Board. She has written commentary and letters on environmental, social and civic issues in local and national newspapers and volunteered as a reporter and proofreader for the News Review in the 1980s.

As a supporting member of True Vote Maryland, she attended public hearings of the state legislature to express concerns about the unreliability and unverifiability of electronic voting and to lobby for a voter-verified paper trail. She raised similar concerns with the Greenbelt city council.

She is a Wilderness Guardian member of the Sierra Club and a supporting member of the Natural Resources Defense Council, Rainforest Action Network and the Chesapeake Bay Foundation.

She also has an active interest in education, as a professional and volunteer mathematics tutor and as an associate adjunct professor in philosophy and humanities at University of Maryland University College. She owns a small educational consulting business, Enquire-Arts, Inc., which is in the process of converting to nonprofit status. She currently serves as Letters Editor of "Philosophical Practice," the journal of the American Philosophical Practitioners Association (APPA). She also holds APPA certifications in philosophical counseling and organizational consulting.

Her hobbies include hiking, martial arts, playing piano and singing in the Maryland Chorus, the community ensemble of the University of Maryland.

Kastner lives on Hedgewood Drive with her husband, Chuck Hagelgans, and their daughter Wendy. Younger daughter Janet was recently married and now lives in Silver Spring. Her parents, Sid (deceased) and Bernice Kastner, were longtime News Review staff members.

Kelly Ivy, Sr.

Kelly Ivy is running for Greenbelt's City Council. He was born in San Angelo, Texas, in 1955. When he was five, his father died and his mother packed up her seven children to be near her family, who had moved to the Washington area. In 1968 she and the children moved to Greenbelt. At age 14, Kelly attended a Valentine's Day dance at Greenbelt Junior High School where he met and fell in love with his wife, Linda. Four years later they were married and recently celebrated their 34th wedding anniversary. It is said that successful people have the ability to develop relationships that last, and three decades later, he feels very successful. "I believe that a happy, thriving marriage of 34 years speaks volumes as to my ability to communicate, cooperate, listen and have a sense of humor," he says.

Linda and Kelly have four children who were raised in Greenbelt. Their oldest, Kelly, Jr., a journeyman electrician with the IBEW, is married to Elizabeth and they have three little girls. Jamie is a paramedic in Anne Arundel County. Amanda teaches preschool at St. Jerome's in Hyattsville and their youngest, Emily, is presently enrolled in the Prince George's Community College paramedic program.

They say it takes a village to raise a child. For the Ivy's, Kelly says, Greenbelt was the perfect village to raise their children. The tradition continues as three granddaughters ages 6, 3 and 9 months are being raised in Greenbelt, too. Ivy wants Greenbelt to remain family oriented. He wants this generation and all that follow to grow up in an environmentally friendly, child-centered community, where they too can be safe to play and grow.

Ivy's life experience is practical and varied. He has been employed at Amtrak for 32 years where he is Supervisor of Locomotive Power at Union Station. He has been responsible for up to 500 employees and has managed a budget of $7 million. He has received commendations for on time performance and safety. For the past six years, he has been a member of PRAB (Park and Recreation Advisory Board). He has volunteered for many Greenbelt organizations, serving as president of Greenbelt Little League, vice president of Greenbelt Boys and Girls Club and baseball and softball commissioner, vice president of Greenbelt Babe Ruth and vice president of Lakeside Association. He headed the effort to bring lights and batting cages to Braden field for the city's youth. This year he was in charge of entertainment for the Labor Day Festival. He attends church at St. Hugh's every Sunday and is a member of the Fraternal Order of Police.

Ivy's style is to listen, learn and find the best solutions available and then to call it like he sees it. Greenbelt's diversity is a great resource and he believes Greenbelt citizens have the answers to some of the vitally important questions and issues. As a councilmember, he will value everyone's input. He will knock on doors, sit down and talk to individuals, ask their opinions, treat them with the respect they deserve and find out what they think the community needs in order for it to work best for all residents.

Konrad Herling

Elected to the Greenbelt City Council in 2003, Konrad Herling, 54, has been serving Greenbelt for more than three decades. Constantly motivated by a goal of "bringing people together to unify the community," Herling founded the Greenbelt Arts Center in 1979, helped organize the Roosevelt Center charrette in 1985 and chaired the Community Relations Advisory Board in the late 1980s. During the 1990s, Herling served as the Master of Ceremonies for the "Greenbelt New Year's" programs, co-produced numerous informational interviews for Greenbelt Access Television and helped publicize the Labor Day Festival.

Recently he helped organize the first International Cultural Festival in 2006, an activity which Herling hopes will help build a more inclusive community; he currently serves on the festival's board. Working with a group of volunteers, he co-produced "Greenbelt in Focus," a news reel video shown before the feature film at Beltway Plaza's Stadium

Academy Theaters. The purpose of the video is to educate movie viewers about Greenbelt and to promote volunteerism and participation in Greenbelt activities. He serves on the board of Greenbelt Access Television and also has provided assistance to the Utopia Film Committee, which has brought a number of original, exceptional films to Greenbelt. In 2001, Herling received the Greenbelt Outstanding Citizen award.

Herling is a broadcast analyst for the Federal Communications Commission's Media Bureau, where he has worked since 1977 conducting legal research. He has received numerous awards for meritorious service resolving legal issues related to the sale, licensing and construction of radio stations and other broadcasters' concerns, including one of the highest honors bestowed on civil service employees at the agency.

Since joining the council in November 2003, Herling has worked with his colleagues in its negotiations to move developers of Greenbelt West to provide affordable housing, open space, and adequate recreational and educational facilities. As a member of the Washington Council of Government's (COG)"Metropolitan Development Committee" he co-wrote a grant application to COG's newly formed regional clearinghouse: the Transportation and Land Use Connection. Grant funding, if awarded, will go toward providing personnel to work with residents and current transportation providers such as Metro and the county, to design a streamlined, consolidated intracity transportation program. Herling feels that Greenbelt, through better transportation, can be a leader in demonstrating how a city can be less dependent on oil, ease access for all residents to get together for social, recreational, cultural events. Further, Herling has advocated that the city reach out with greater efforts to secure input from the disabled community as the city continues its efforts to create safer ways for everyone to travel and walk throughout town.

Herling also serves on the Prince George's County's Municipal Association, has participated with the Roosevelt Center Merchants Association and has served in the Maryland Municipal League on MML's Telecommunications Committee and with the National League of Cities focused on learning from other communities' effective strategies to provide services more efficiently, as well as the importance of building inclusive communities.

Additionally, Herling hopes in a new term to advocate that the city fully explore a more pro-active role in key aspects of economic development: marketing the many assets the town offers, designating an arts district and implementing the community input derived from the Greener Initiative, both for the purpose of working with GHI to build a greener, more sustainable and vibrant original Greenbelt and as an invaluable model which could be used in designing planned community alternatives for Greenbelt West development.

Judith F. Davis

Known to one and all as just "J," Judith F. Davis is in her seventh term on the city council. She has served as mayor since 1997.

Prior to her election in 1993, she was a member of the city's Advisory Planning Board (APB) for 10 years and was elected chair by that board's members for five years from 1988 to 1992. ## A Review

Life Issues Are the Subject Of GAC’s “Saving Us Saints”

by Gerald C. Martin

Anyone expecting to see “Rocky Horror Show” at the Greenbelt Arts Center last weekend, as mis-advertised in the Washington Post, was surprised to encounter a very different sort of play.

Heralds of Hope Theatre Company presented “Saving Us Saints” written by Dorothy Phaire and directed by Dr. Percy Thomas. It is the second in a series of plays about the fictional Jordan family and its struggles to stay true to its values.

There are two inter-connected story lines as the teen-aged daughter Mary, ably played by Janelle Osborne, is tempted to reject her beliefs in order to be popular while her parents try to deal with an unexpected pregnancy and infidelity.

The opening scene in Mary’s high school is an eye-opener for anyone who remembers when chewing gum in class was a felony. Romeo Prescott is the main troublemaker, played to perfection by Matthew Carroll. His attempts to seduce Mary on a bet create a lot of strife in the Jordan household. He is abetted in his endeavors by the popular duo of Bebe Brown (Shannon Hines) and Niki Wilson (Rachel Russell). Known as the “Chocolate Delights” they do their best to lead Mary astray.

Meanwhile, Mary’s father Noah Jordan (Archie Williams) is unwilling to cope with the prospect of a new baby. At the age of 45 he cannot bear the thought of raising another child. He thinks his life is over and desperately looks in all the wrong places to find a way out. Eager to steer him wrong is Jazza-rene Jones (Comelita C. Payton). Her rendition of “Fever” in the night-club scene is fantastic, not only because of her beautiful voice but by the lighting effects and costuming.

Trying to hold the family together is the matriarch Mama Pearl played with gusto by Arlene Clipper. She tends to overwhelm anyone in her path and sees things as good or evil with no middle ground.

The cast is rounded out with Billie Taylor as the very pregnant Sarah Jordan, Delicia Moore as the beauty store proprietor, Carolyn Marcus as her customer and Tivona C. Revell as a beautician. Percy Thomas played the teacher and minister on opening night but Henry Green is scheduled for future performances. Ensemble parts are well played by Dede Amegnaglo, Louise Djapgne, Mia Phaire and Teonya Russell.

The Jordan family living room is the major part of the set with scenes elsewhere separated by lighting effects and easily moved set pieces. This greatly cuts down time between scenes but may be somewhat distracting. Generally the sound quality was very good although sometimes some of the younger actors were too quiet. In an interview with the author, Phaire said, “My purpose is to provide a ‘slice of life’ showing real-life issues that people face (e.g. peer pressure/infidelity) with a moral underlying message. My intention is not to sermonize but instead be a source of spiritual as well as social discussion. For instance, in addition to simply having a good time at the performance, I hope the audience will think about problems facing young people today, such as following the wrong crowd into drugs, alcohol or pre-marital sex as well as adult frustrations in marital relationships.” A movie version of the Jordan family’s story is scheduled for release in 2010. See it this Friday, November 3 or Saturday at 8 p.m. or Sunday at 2 p.m. at the Greenbelt Arts Center.

KABOOM! Designates City As “Playful City USA”

by Barbara Hopkins

KaBOOM! has awarded Greenbelt a plaque designating the city a 2007 Playful City USA, part of the organization’s National Campaign for Play. Greenbelt, along with 31 other communities in the country to be so named, will be honored at KaBOOM!’s Playful City USA National Recognition Ceremony to be held November 13 through 17 in conjunction with the National League of Cities Congress and Expo in New Orleans. The 31 founding Playful City USA communities have the opportunity to apply for one of three $25,000 grants to support the play agenda for 2008. There will also be five $5,000 honorary mention awards to implement the 2008 Play Day, an event that must be held annually to maintain Playful City USA status. Greenbelt will also receive highway signs referring to this national honor.

As part of its Playful City USA program, Greenbelt will conduct a day for building a new playground at Ora Court in Windsor Green at 9 a.m. on November 3. In this event, children will select equipment for the playground.

After she accepted the plaque for the city at the regular city council meeting on October 22, Councilmember Leta Mach told council the program allows “citizen involvement at all levels and ages.” Mayor Judith Davis thanked Mach for her efforts in achieving the designation for the city and Mach in turn thanked the city manager, Assistant Director of Public Works Bill Phelan and members of the Park and Recreation Advisory Board for helping make it happen.

Yoga Chant Event Due at Arts Center

Bhagavan Das, a counter-cultural icon and guru to Beastie Boy Mike D., will lead a non-denominational, celebratory giving of thanks at the Greenbelt Arts Center on Thanksgiving weekend. Members of several area gospel choirs may also be on hand to lift their voices with the audience in a “kirtan” event.

“Kirtan (yoga chant) is a participatory, cross-cultural music experience that incorporates the audience right into the performance,” worldbeat musician and producer Wynne Paris explained. Paris will be playing guitar at Bhagavan Das’ Greenbelt event.

This call-and-response sacred experience gained popularity throughout the U.S. on the heels of the yoga movement. All ages and cultural backgrounds are welcome. Greenbelt Om Community Yoga is sponsoring the event as part of an effort to make connections among black and white and Eastern and Western communities in Prince George’s County. “At a kirtan, people create incredible music using Sanskrit words, gospel-style call-and-response, African drums and joy – just pure joy,” Greenbelt Om owner Kim Kash said.

Bhagavan Das has recorded a number of albums and written a memoir, “It’s Here Now, Are You?” He will be performing Saturday, November 24 at 8 p.m. at the Greenbelt Arts Center, 123 Centerway. Tickets at a discounted price may be reserved through Greenbelt Om Community Yoga, at www.greenbeltom.com. A limited number of tickets may be available at the door on the day of the event.

of “inactive” voters has occurred. An inactive voter is defined as one who has not voted in at least the last two presidential elections.

While Greenbelt East now represents almost 40 percent of all registered voters, it traditionally has had a relatively low turnout for city elections. In 2005, only 12 percent voted compared to 27 percent in Greenbelt Center and 33 percent in North End. These last two precincts are informally considered the “center” city. Only 2.7 percent of Springhill Lake voters turned out in 2005.

Transportation

The Greenbelt Connection will transport voters free of charge to and from the polls next Tuesday between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. Call 301-474-4100 for a ride. The bus will also make pickups at Green Ridge House at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Council Reviews Plans for Middle School

by Barbara Hopkins

Five years have passed since the Greenbelt City Council first reviewed a site plan for replacement of the deteriorating building that is currently Greenbelt Middle School. Now the Prince George’s County Board of Education has requested the city’s response to a revised site plan by the board’s November meeting. City acceptance of the plan will allow it to be included in the county’s Capital Improvement Program (CIP). This step is important in obtaining funds to allow the project to move ahead.

At the regular city council meeting on October 22, Don Lee, acting director of the school board’s Planning and Architectural Services, presented Modified Plan D, which addressed council’s concerns about the original plan. Lee was assisted in his presentation by Rupert McCave, Capital Improvement director; staff architect Adrian King; and Eugene Delmar, chief architect.

The revised plan provides for a two-story building designed using “green” architecture that would accommodate 990 students. The new design permits use of the old building during the construction process.

Relocating the new building to a different corner of the site allows preservation of most of the wooded areas. The new plan also provides for renovation of the historic portion of the old building, including the gym. By facing Breezewood Drive instead of Greenbelt Road, the school would be more friendly to pedestrians.

City’s Concerns

Some remaining concerns for the city are access to the school by students who will need to cross from the other side of Greenbelt Road and the lack of a good connection between the new school and what remains of the old one. The school bus lot will have a new orientation on the site, but some means of separating it from the various activities of the school will be needed.

Council suggested that a parking area situated in front of the school be moved to a position behind the school, shortening the distance between the two buildings. Moving the school this short distance would have an added advantage in siting it further from a hillside where the soil has yet to be tested to confirm that it could support the building.

Lee said school board officials are also seeking input from the city about possible community use of the historic part of the old building, as well as concerning the types of athletic fields desired.

Of prime concern to council is whether the number of students to be accommodated (990) is sufficient, considering that the school board has not yet determined what type of school it will be.

Under discussion is an initiative that would create schools for pre-K through grade 8, or the school could enroll students in grades 6 through 8. The grades accommodated will determine the size of school needed and the location of students attending it.

Making the school something other than a typical middle school could alter the boundaries for students assigned to the school. Some councilmembers expressed fears that the school might not be big enough as designed.

The lack of input to date from either the public or Greenbelt’s Advisory Committee on Education about the school plan also concerned members of council and at least one member of the audience.

Conditions

In order to move the project forward, Councilmember Rodney Roberts made a motion to accept the plan with conditions that address council’s remaining concerns. Councilmember Edward Putens provided the second, adding a condition that if the school is approved for pre-K through 8, the plan would come back to council for reconsideration.

Council also requested a public forum on the school to be held in a timely manner and frequent updates on the project’s progress. The motion carried by unanimous vote.

RE-ELECT ROBERTS TO CITY COUNCIL

VOTE NOVEMBER 6

Rodney Roberts always stands up for what he believes in:

Springhill Lake Redevelopment: Roberts worked hard to make sure plans for Springhill Lake (SHL) redevelopment would meet Greenbelt standards (i.e., adequate schools, recreation facilities, public safety, reasonable density and appropriate ratio of For Sale vs. rental properties). The plan submitted to City Council called for the transfer of the existing SHL elementary school site to Aimco (the owner/developer) for use as a storm water pond. The plan also would double the residential density (from nearly 3000 to 6000 units) resulting in the need for not one but two elementary schools. Yet Aimco refused to provide an alternate site for the existing SHL elementary school. An Aimco representative publicly stated that they did not believe a school would “fit in” with their proposed development. After conditions were added, including one requiring Aimco to work with the Prince George’s County School Board to resolve the school site issue, the plan was approved on a 4-1 vote with Roberts opposed. Roberts did not give up, he continued to fight!!!

Roberts worked to protect our SHL Elementary School site: For Aimco’s SHL plans to move forward, they were required by the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission (MNCPPC) to provide a letter from the School Board stating its intent to transfer the existing SHL Elementary School site to Aimco. On January 9, 2007, Roberts attended a School Board meeting that was described as an open meeting, to hear testimony from Aimco and take action on their request for a letter of intent to transfer ownership of the SHL school site to Aimco. Only Aimco was allowed to speak. After hearing testimony from Aimco that Roberts knew to be untrue, he raised his hand until he was recognized by the meeting chair. Roberts took that opportunity to speak out, asserting that Aimco was making statements that were not true and asking that the meeting be opened to allow others to speak, so the School Board could hear both sides. Because Roberts spoke up, the School Board agreed to hold a public hearing on January 17, 2007 in Greenbelt at Eleanor Roosevelt High School. At that hearing, many Greenbelt residents spoke of the need for adequate schools in SHL. Since that hearing, the School Board has refused to give up our school site and Aimco is apparently redrawing their plans.

Taxes: Roberts supported a citizen petition in 2007 asking City Council not to raise the city property tax rate on top of a 10% increase due to higher assessments.

Greenbelt Middle School: At City Council’s regular meeting in October 2007, Roberts made a motion (passed 5-0) to support the proposed concept for a new Greenbelt Middle School.

County election.

Signs

The decision by Ivy not to participate in a candidates’ agreement to limit sign placements to designated locations within the city on poles erected by the city, but to place signs in the yards of his supporters instead could have been a source of controversy. Instead it has not. The other six candidates used the city locations. No one publicly criticized any candidate for sign placement.

Crime

Shortly before the election campaigns began, a number of residents raised concern about recent crimes in and near Roosevelt Center. Some advocated closure of the Gladys Noon Spellman pedestrian overpass across the Baltimore-Washington Parkway since the overpass was perceived to be an escape route for criminals committing crimes in central Greenbelt.

Only Kastner has advocated installing a gate at the overpass, one that can be opened and closed by remote control upon request by a person using an adjacent call box. Others preferred measures such as surveillance cameras, emergency call boxes and improved lighting or following recommendations to be made by a joint advisory board group.

All candidates expressed support for the Police Department. Herling and Roberts felt, however, that officers could be better deployed utilizing more foot and bike patrolling. Putens advocated rehiring retired police officers to offset temporary manpower shortages and patrol problem areas.

As to dealing with crime within the city, Davis and some incumbents noted that the number of crimes being committed was decreasing in Greenbelt. Ivy said that Greenbelt was pretty safe except for some hot spots that must be addressed.

Kastner and Roberts felt that reducing density of new development would be a crime deterrent. Kastner also suggested increasing community cohesiveness by letting youths know they are needed and wanted and by welcoming new residents.

Herling would bring back the teen club and involve teens more in the theater.

Putens advocated installing surveillance cameras throughout the city, as did Ivy, who called them “cheap cops.” Herling felt that cameras should be used only as a last resort and that lighting should be improved instead.

Mach said that the city needed more eyes on the street, as can be done with neighborhood watches. Davis advocated more sophisticated police technology, as did Mach.

Taxes

Another potential issue was tax rate increases. While discussed, the issue did not seem to arouse much public interest. Kastner had appeared before council this spring to urge it not to raise city taxes. As a councilmember, Roberts also expressed opposition to a tax rate increase. However, with the remainder of council convinced that an increase was needed to fund city services, Roberts did vote to adopt the budget based upon a tax rate increase.

In the campaign, Ivy has been the strongest advocate of not increasing the tax rate. His priority is to fund the needed services of the Police, Fire and Public Works Departments and to reevaluate, reorganize and restructure the other departments to avoid new tax increases.

Kastner said she will work hard to prevent further tax rate increases. She advocates a citizen budget task force to explore ways to lower costs and increase efficient use of revenues.

Roberts said the city needs to be economical in how it spends its tax dollars and cannot raise taxes every year. However, he sees no need to cut city services.

Putens noted that the major reason for tax increases has been citizen approval of past bond issue referendums and authorization of collective bargaining for police officers. He intends to maintain city services during the next two years.

Herling said that most proposals to cut expenditures in the last budget would not have made a significant dent in the budget and that a tax rate reduction would have translated into a reduction in important services.

Davis noted that many city services could use added funding. The city will have to work with its citizens to find ways to keep expenses down, she said, but the city must think about adequate compensation for its employees.

Mach is concerned that the current economic situation could cause the city to lose established state and federal grants. She advocated that the city work with state and national organizations to prevent such a loss from happening. She said she will seek out grants, support public/private partnerships and levy taxes to support city services. However, she would like to establish a city homeowner tax credit to limit the impact on persons with limited incomes.

Homeless

A question raised by a member of the audience at the Greenbelt East candidates’ night caused some interest. Greenbelter José Morales proposed converting the former post office space at Roosevelt Center into a homeless shelter.

Ivy was reported to agree with the idea wholeheartedly. He said it doesn’t take a lot to turn a homeless person around.

Putens, however, pointed out that the space is owned by someone else and that the homeless need many other services which could best be done on a regional basis.

Mach said that much is needed to help the homeless and that government cannot do it on its own. She noted that the city has a few programs to help prevent homelessness.

Herling also felt that homelessness was a regional problem and that the city should be a more assertive advocate for the program.

Kastner said that she had tried unsuccessfully to organize a group to do something about homelessness and that she was willing to look into options such as setting up a satellite emergency shelter in Roosevelt Center.

Davis suggested that the city look into ways it can help without incurring great expense.

Goals

The candidates set out differing goals to accomplish if they are elected.

Mach: Resolve school issues related to new development.

Davis: Maintain and enhance services that make Greenbelt the unique place it is.

Herling: Unify the city through an effective intra-city transportation program and create an inclusive community.

Roberts: Hold fast to ideals upon which the city had been founded.

Putens: Strengthen public safety and maintain services during the next two years in face of a flat budget.

Kastner: Address concerns about crime and restore the lake.

Ivy: Have each department head restructure, reorganize and find ways to save money over last year’s budget to achieve lower taxes.

NASA Credit Union Helps Raise ERHS Band Funds

Earlier this month NASA Federal Credit Union (NASA FCU) helped parents and students from Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) raise funds for their planned once-in-a-lifetime trip to China. Members of the school’s Wind Ensemble have been invited to play at events taking place prior to the 2008 Olympic Games in Beijing. Parents, students, the school and the community are pitching in to raise donations to make the dream a reality.

The activities, held at the newly opened NASA Federal Credit Union Greenbelt Branch, located near the school, included a car wash, bake sale, musical entertainment by the ERHS Dixieland Combo and Clarinet Choir and an appearance by DC Wizards Cheerleaders. The Credit Union provided volunteers, event advertising and additional support for the car wash. Cars lined up at 10 a.m. and in just four hours students, parents and volunteers washed over 100 vehicles, sold baked goods and raised more than $2,300.

Credit Union President and CEO Douglas M. Allman, who attended the event, says “NASA Federal Credit Union is committed to supporting the communities we serve. We were pleased to help the students of Eleanor Roosevelt High School as they work and save for what will surely be an enriching cultural and educational experience in Beijing. Our members and employees appreciate the opportunity to help these students make their dream come true.”

ERHS Band Director Sally Wagner said, “We are thrilled and honored to be one of five East Coast school bands to be invited to participate in the Pre-Olympic ceremonies in Beijing.

ERHS, a science and technology as well as a comprehensive high school, is one of the largest public schools in the state and has received numerous awards over the years including the U.S. Department of Education Blue Ribbon School, New American High School, Award for Advanced Placement and National School of Character.

ERHS musicians performed while a bake sale and car wash at the new NASA Federal Credit Union were held to raise money for the Wind Ensemble to join other select area musicians for a pre-Olympic trip to China.

Wakefield has also invited the Maryland Community Band which he conducts. He formed the band in 1995 as a community outreach program of the University of Maryland band. The band is comprised of individuals ages 22 to 81: university alumni, faculty and staff as well as members of the surrounding community. The band will be joined by the band instructor and a small group of students from Coppin State University.

“There’s no better way for the Chinese people to get a feel for the American people than to see some of their youth,” Wakefield said.

Described by Wakefield as “one of the best music programs in the state,” the Eleanor Roosevelt High School Wind Ensemble is the top band in the high school’s program. Auditions for seats are held every year and students’ musical ability must be topnotch. Along with wind instruments such as flutes, clarinets, trumpets and trombones, the band has percussion instruments.

Generating enthusiasm for the upcoming trip has not been a problem, said band director Wagner.

“I’m really excited, I’ve never been out of the country,” Bethany White, senior flute player, said. White will celebrate her 18th birthday during the band’s time in China.

Generating the funds for the trip, however, has proven to be a daunting task. The high travel costs have led students and their parents into a fundraising frenzy, selling fruit, cheesecakes, fresh Christmas wreaths, ads in school concert brochures and Roosevelt Raiders vinyl window clings.

“We’re kind of nickel-and-diming it and selling everything not nailed down to the floor,” Wagner said.

Students also generated public attention for the trip dressed as Chinese warriors at the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival, selling various small Chinese trinkets. They held a carwash and bake sale on the opening day of the NASA Federal Credit Union in Greenbelt. The band is planning a fundraiser at Bowie’s T.J. Elliott’s restaurant on November 26 where 10 percent of the proceeds will go to help fund the trip.

Students are also seeking funds by applying for special grants and writing letters to local businesses and band alums asking for donations.

“Even those kids who aren’t going are participating in group fundraisers,” Wagner said. Some students are being asked by their parents to pay for a portion of the trip while some students are paying in full.

“You get very good at persuasion,” Teresa Ferrete, a senior flute player, said. The band has currently raised enough funds to take all the students to China. “We’re still working on getting everyone home,” Wagner said.

The ensemble, which will play primarily music by American composers in China, will travel with roughly 47 members and 12 adult chaperones as well as some band alums who graduated the previous year.

“I’m scared to death that I’m taking 50 teens around the world. But they aren’t regular teens; they’re all wonderful, there’s not one that’s a bad egg,” Wagner said. “It’s like a family.”

Despite the furious fundraising and public outreach, Wagner says the trip is contingent on the “world situation” at the time of travel. In April 2002, the band was scheduled to travel to England, but the events of September 11, 2001, caused the Prince George’s County School Board to cancel all trips. Nevertheless, Roosevelt’s band was permitted to go.

“It was amazing that we went because people there said it showed the American spirit can’t be tampered with,” Wagner said.

The Wind Ensemble is expected to be in China June 21 through July 1. The Olympic Games begin in Beijing Aug. 8.

Editor’s Note: Readers wishing to donate funds for the Roosevelt students’ trip to China may write a check made out to “ERHS Band.” In the memo line of the check, note “China Donation.” Send the check to ERHS, Attn: Sally Wagner; 7601 Hanover Parkway, Greenbelt, MD 20770. Acknowledgement of the donation will be sent to the donor.

Prince George’s Co.
Wins National Award

The National Association of Counties announced that Prince George’s County is among 10 recipients nationwide of the 2006-2007 Center for Sustainable Communities Awards.

The awards, presented every two years, recognize the most effective and innovative county-led partnerships to develop economically prosperous, environmentally safe and socially equitable communities.

The county was honored for its Low Impact Development/Green Highway programs with the Maryland State Highway Administration. Winners were selected by a panel of independent judges. Honorees will receive their awards during a reception this winter in Washington, D.C.

Prince George’s County and the Maryland State Highway Administration (SHA) have implemented activities promoting the practices of Low Impact Development and Green Highways that exemplify the best in sustainable development principles by fostering economic reinvestment, infrastructure savings, protection of critical environmental areas and resources and the creation of beautiful, livable communities. Working with the SHA and with the support of the Federal Highway Administration, Prince George’s County has led a federal-state-local collaboration to protect watersheds and waterways through the use of low impact development strategies. The county’s effort has become a nationally-recognized model and Prince George’s County serves as host of the first national conference on Low Impact Development.

Bizarre Planet-Mass Object Discovered

Using NASA’s Swift and Rossi X-ray Timing Explorer (RXTE) satellites, Goddard astronomers have discovered one of the most bizarre planet-mass objects ever found. But instead of orbiting a normal star, this low-mass body orbits a rapidly spinning pulsar.

“This object is merely the skeleton of a star,” says co-discoverer and Greenbelter Craig Markwardt of Goddard Space Flight Center. “The pulsar has eaten away the star’s outer envelope and all that remains is its helium-rich core.”

After the discovery Markwardt realized that the object was a rapidly spinning pulsar, a neutron star that spins hundreds of times per second – faster than a kitchen blender.

MIT astronomers also observed the pulsar and low-mass object with RXTE before it faded to invisibility on June 21. Goddard and MIT scientists reached identical conclusions and the two teams have co-authored a paper that was accepted for publication in the Astrophysical Journal Letters.

The system is only the eighth millisecond pulsar observed to be accreting mass from a companion and only one other such system has a pulsar companion with such a low mass.

The system probably formed several billion years ago. Today, the neutron star’s powerful gravity produces a tidal bulge on its companion that eventually causes an outburst like the one observed in June. With an estimated distance of roughly 25,000 light years, the system is normally too faint to be detected at any wavelength and is only visible during an outburst. It was never seen to erupt until this June and as Markwardt notes, “We don’t know how long it will slumber before it wakes up again.”

Energy Saving Tip

Try this tip to save money and help the planet keep its cool: Replace Old Appliances. Though buying a new appliance isn’t cheap, replacing an old appliance, like a refrigerator, washing machine or furnace with a new, energy-efficient model can significantly cut anyone’s energy bill. Look for the Energy Star label as a minimum; some models can be even more efficient. And though buying a new appliance is a major investment, many states and utility companies offer substantial credits or other incentives to replace an outdated appliance with a more efficient one.

Council Deals with Zoning Tax Credit and Fire Cuts

by Barbara Hopkins

The petitions and requests portion of Greenbelt City Council meetings provides an opportunity for citizens to address council about issues of concern. At council’s meeting on October 22, two people in the audience requested an opportunity to speak.

Other agenda items included a proposed homeowner’s property tax credit and a bill affecting zoning proposed by the county council.

Fire Dept. Budget

Chris Fleshman, president of the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department and Rescue Squad, told council the budget for fire fighting is again being cut. The county has requested cuts of just under 2.5 percent of the budget, or an estimated $7,500 per station, for a total of $285,000 throughout Prince George’s County.

He said the cuts were to come from the staff management budget, which includes the $13 million budget for volunteer departments. Fleshman said county officials were not forthcoming about any cuts to the budget covering career firemen.

Fleshman said revenue from bingo games has gone down. He said 42 bingo games take place each week in this part of the county and the competition for gaming revenue is therefore stiff.

Councilmember Rodney Roberts made a motion, which was seconded and approved, for council to send a letter of support for the volunteer fire fighters to county officials.

Charlestowne North

Robert Schmertz, a tenant from Charlestowne North apartments, appeared before council to request help because the management is seeking rent increases of 10, 20 or even 40 percent after asking tenants to relocate to newly renovated apartments. Letters from management stated the reason for the raise in rent as “increased costs.” Utilities are included in the rent and councilmembers acknowledged that rising costs for electricity and water could be the reason for the increases.

Tenants of long standing are being asked to reapply to lease an apartment and some have been turned down, possibly for credit ratings unacceptable to the management company. The situation was described as being similar to one that occurred four years ago. Timing is also of concern, as some tenants receiving letters in October may have to move by mid-December.

Councilmember Edward Putens advised that the tenants’ association should hold a meeting immediately to determine the amount and extent of the rent increases. It should also elect officers to give specific individuals the right to speak for the association, Putens added. The Greenbelt City Council agreed to contact County Councilmember Ingrid Turner on the tenants’ behalf to see if she could help.

Property Tax Credit

A city property tax credit program for those homeowners who meet income limitation criteria drew closer to reality when council voted to move forward with such a program. Most likely, the credit will equal no more than 25 percent of the state credit and the program would be incorporated into the state’s program, simplifying participation.

According to city staff, it is too late to institute such a program for this fiscal year, but the credit could be available in Fiscal Year 2009 if council agreed to take formal action to provide notice to the state of the city’s intent.

Council had asked staff to look into the feasibility of such a program for the city over concerns that rising assessments and tax rate increases pose a burden for homeowners on fixed incomes.

Zoning Legislation

Staff in Greenbelt’s Department of Planning and Community Development learned after the fact that County Councilmember Ingrid Turner had proposed a bill (CB-38-2007) that, if passed, may adversely affect the City of Greenbelt.

The bill, a zoning text amendment, would facilitate the redevelopment of the Hanover Apartment complex (formerly Greenway Village) by altering some requirements of the approval process. The property lies adjacent to Greenbelt but has not been annexed to become part of the city and subject to its governance.

City staff believe the bill was written for specific application to the Hanover Apartments redevelopment because it contains criteria that could only be met by that complex or the adjacent Hunting Ridge Condominiums.

The bill would apply to apartment developments for the elderly and handicapped in the R-18 Zone that are on a certain class of street (such as Hanover Parkway), are located within a mile of existing medical offices (such as Hanover Office Park), are within two miles of an existing hospital (such as Doctors Hospital) and are less than 25 feet from an existing right-of-way for the Capital Beltway. Greenbelt has historically opposed site-specific bills such as this.

In addition, provisions in the bill allow greater flexibility than is available under the existing Special Exception process. The term of use solely by the elderly and/or handicapped would be not less than 10 years (currently 20 years). The legislation includes no restrictions on density for properties that are part of an existing multi-family development. The density would be determined at the time of the Detailed Site Plan approval.

Putens called the proposed bill “a slap in the face” to Greenbelt and asked City Solicitor Robert Manzi to explore legal alternatives available to the city. Putens added he would let Turner know of his disappointment in her.

According to staff agenda comments, the proposed legislation does not reflect the substance of numerous conversations city staff and/or councilmembers have had with the owners of the complex, Federal Capital Partners, and their attorney, Larry Taub of O’Malley, Miles, Nylen and Gilmore.

Taub, who was present at the meeting, said the legislation was not intended to be “a slap in the face.” He declared his client’s interest in maintaining negotiations with the city. He said the bill is necessary because this project presents “a different type of situation” that requires greater flexibility than is provided under current regulations.

Judge Williams Hears Combined Suits Challenging ICC Approval

by Thomas X. White

The legal challenges to the construction of the Intercounty Connector (ICC) by a group of public interest and environmental organizations continued at the second hearing on the case on October 29 at the Federal District Court in Greenbelt.

The hearing took about two and a half hours, adjourning just before 1 p.m. In closing the hearing, Judge Alexander Williams said he found the case quite interesting. He noted there were several issues relating to judicial discretion, the applicability of the relevant statutes and the nuances of the regulatory language.

He seemed to relish the fact that the case presented some issues that, in the absence of applicable case law, may require him to provide his own interpretations. It is his intent to provide a decision on or before November 8.

The earlier hearing, on October 1, had involved oral arguments on a suit by the Audubon Naturalist Society of the Central Atlantic States, the Maryland Native Plant Society, Inc. and individual citizens Roger Metcalf and Eve Barton against the defendant US Department of Transportation, Federal Highway Administration (FHWA), US Army Corps of Engineers, and the State of Maryland, which entered the case as an intervenor defendant. At that hearing, issues before the court mainly involved deficiencies noted by the plaintiff with the review and approval process, under the National Environmental Policy Act and the Clean Water Act (see GNR of October 4, 2007), that had been utilized by the defendants for the proposed highway.

A separate suit was brought by plaintiffs Environmental Defense and Sierra Club in the District of Columbia Federal District Court against the same defendants. Because the schedule of the judge assigned the case would have delayed the hearing, the two suits were consolidated and both were assigned to Williams in Greenbelt.

The latter suit also challenges FHWA approval of the ICC by alleging that the ICC was approved without a proper evaluation of the effects of the proposed highway on local pollution by particulate matter and other toxic pollutants as required under the Clean Air Act.

Prior to the case being heard, Williams had a brief meeting in his office with attorneys from both sides to go over ground rules for the day’s arguments. Following that meeting, the court was called to order about 10:10 a.m.

Williams noted that the parties had participated in a conference call on Friday, October 27 and that he was interested in pursuing with the plaintiffs the jurisdictional questions involving the question of “citizen suit” authorities under the Clean Water and the Clean Air Acts and the question of monitoring locations for particulates greater than three-tenths of a mile distant from “hotspot” locations in the defendants’ analysis of air pollution impacts from the proposed new highway.

The plaintiff’s case was presented by Robert Yuhnke, representing Environmental Defense, who argued that the FHWA did not comply with Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) requirements for its conformity determination as set forth in Section 93.123(c) of its regulations.

He further told the court that no reference to that section could be found in the FHWA Record of Decision conformity analysis and there was no indication how the agency had complied with EPA regulations. He said the administrative record is devoid of any indication of how the agency had complied with the EPA requirements for conducting hotspot analyses for proposed new highways.

Yuhnke also told the court it appears that the agency may have relied on subsection (d) instead of (c), but that this section provides guidance and is not sufficient to meet EPA standards for conducting conformity analysis. Further he noted that the stated regulatory requirements (the promulgated regulations) trump “guidance.”

Monitor Location

The second issue challenged by the plaintiffs in regard to the conformity analysis for the project is the location of the monitor chosen to establish baseline measurements to assess the potential impact for a proposed new highway facility.

Specifically, the plaintiffs argue that the selection by the FHWA of a monitor at a Muirkirk Road location about a mile and a half from the “hotspot” location of the proposed interchange of the new ICC with I-95 is too far away to be a valid indicator of expected pollution caused by the new highway. The plaintiffs told the court that the monitor location should have been within less than half a mile from the selected hotspot.

Representing the defendants in the case was Mark Nitzczynski of the Department of Justice. He argued that the conformity determination complied with both the EPA rules and the guidance. He asserted that the agency relied on EPA advice that the use of a quantitative analysis of potential particulate pollution would not be reliable. The agency instead used a qualitative approach as allowed by subsection (d)(2).

He told the court that such action by the agency is discretionary and should be allowed by the court. He alleged that the plaintiffs are seeking to have the court rule that the FHWA action was arbitrary and capricious, while the opposite is true. Williams asked him to explain why the clearer (mandatory) language of subsection (c)(1) and (2) should not have applied.

Nitzczynski’s response was that he is saying now that they (FWHA) complied with subsection (c). A discussion of the relative difference between “should” and “must” in regulatory language ensued.

The defendants also argued that in the long run the potential effect of particulate matter pollution did not really matter. They provided a graph for the court indicating that regionally and nationally, the level of so-called PM-2.5 pollution was declining due to the more rigorous regulation of its sources by new EPA regulations.

Williams pressed the defendants on how confident they are about their calculations. He wanted information on how confident the court could be.

Nitzczynski offered that the FHWA consulted in a detailed fashion with the EPA, that it had no disagreement with the chosen analysis, and advised the FHWA that the use of MOBILE 6.2 (an EPA air Modeling tool, as suggested by the plaintiffs) would have resulted in an incorrect analysis. Instead, EPA advised that a qualitative analysis would be okay until a quantitative method became available.

New Filing

Since the October 1 hearing, two additional filings have been made in the case. On October 12 a stipulation by all parties to prevent irreparable harm to the environment from occurring before the court decision on pending summary judgment set forth an agreement on the only work that may occur between October 16 and November 12, 2007 on ICC Contract A.

All of the listed work occurs in zones of the project in Montgomery County, mainly near the proposed intersection of the ICC with I-270. The purpose of the stipulation is to define the agreements so that plaintiffs’ later actions in the case are not unfairly prejudiced by a failure to move earlier in the litigation for relief.

On October 23 also, the Environmental Defense and Sierra Club filed a partial motion for summary judgment on plaintiffs counts 39 and 41. With this motion the plaintiffs seek a declaration that defendant’s approval of the ICC was unlawful under the Federal Highways Act and NEPA and their implementing regulations.

The motion also seeks to vacate defendants’ approval of the proposed ICC and to enjoin defendants from funding the proposed ICC until they conduct a lawful environmental review of the project.

The particulars of this filing relate to the air quality impacts they allege would be attributed to the construction of the ICC and the disregard by the defendants of significant health impacts occasioned by the federal actions regarding the proposed project. At the October 29 hearing the defendants informed Williams that they would be filing their response the next day, October 30.

ACE Hosts Annual Meeting With PTA Representatives

by Mary Moien

The Greenbelt Advisory Committee on Education (ACE) held its annual meeting with school PTA officers on October 23. Representatives were present from Greenbelt Elementary School, Springhill Lake Elementary School, Magnolia Elementary School and St. Hugh's School. In addition, Turning Point Academy, a new charter school in Greenbelt East, was also represented. The ACE committee provided highlights from that meeting.

Jeff Morisette, ACE chair, began the meeting with an overview of ACE's history and activities. He mentioned current issues that ACE is addressing such as area development projects and their impact on schools as well as a school wide plan to investigate a switch to Pre-kindergarden – 8th grade schools.

Having attended the City Council meeting on October 22 Morisette was able to speak to the plans for the Greenbelt Middle School renovation. The planned facility is due to hold 990 students but there is some concern that it will not be adequate once the new development in Greenbelt West brings in more students. The Greenbelt City Council has given its preliminary approval for this plan but is asking ACE for input.

The PTA representatives shared information next. Greenbelt Elementary School is interested in creating more opportunities for their 6th grade students, parents and teachers to communicate with those at Greenbelt Middle School as a way of assisting student transition. Turning Point Academy voiced a need for access to more space for large events and is seeking ideas. Others present suggested the school contact the Greenbelt Community Center, public library and Greenbelt Arts Center.

St. Hugh's described enrollment decline concerns. They currently have about 200 students in the school. The PTA representative from Magnolia Elementary School was interested in learning ways the PTA can help to get a new teacher on staff. The school had lost a 4th grade teacher last year and now there are more students than expected. They were encouraged to begin by working with their principal.

Irish, Celtic Music At Marietta Museum

On Sunday, November 11 at 4 p.m. there will be a live musical performance of traditional Irish and Celtic music at Marietta House Museum. Dr. Elizabeth Barber will sing the performance, featuring traditional Irish tunes. There will be light refreshments.

There is a nominal fee. Reservations are required by November 5. For more information and reservations call 301-464-5291, TTY 301-699-2544 or visit the website at www.pgparcs.com.

Marietta House Museum is a historic property of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission located at 5626 Bell Station Road in Glenn Dale, off Route 193 just north of Rt. 450 and Annapolis Road.

There was a discussion about schools and nonprofit status as a way of raising funds. A website was mentioned (www.PTOToday.com) as a site that provides information on this subject. This also led to a discussion about how to become part of the annual Combined Federal Campaign (CFC). St. Hugh's School has been involved in the CFC.

A discussion about fundraising was the liveliest one with each school sharing what worked at their school, while other representatives feverishly took notes. Multicultural events, Scholastic Book Fairs, grant writing and Spring Fairs were among the most popular ways to raise money.

All participants were eager to remain in contact with each other to be able to further share information learned at this meeting.

On November 6

Doctors Hospital Is Approved to Do PCI

Doctors Community Hospital has received approval from the Maryland Health Care Commission to continue participating in the Cardiovascular-Patient Outcomes Research Team (C-PORT) study, performing a special early intervention medical treatment for heart attack patients.

The medical treatment is called primary percutaneous coronary intervention (PCI), more commonly known as coronary angioplasty. The procedure involves inserting a balloon-like device into a patient’s arteries to help clear a blockage. In most cases PCI is performed to reduce or eliminate symptoms of heart disease and congestive heart failure but doctors are increasingly using PCI as a life-saving measure with heart attack patients.

“The ability to immediately perform emergency angioplasty on patients has saved the lives of numerous heart attack victims and we take great pride in providing this level of care to the community,” said Dr. Sridhar Chatrathi, interventional cardiologist at Doctors Community Hospital.

so we can bring more people to the Center.”

Question 3: (condensed version) “What tools can the city bring to the table to help address the challenges facing Roosevelt Center?”

Roberts indicated the questions and answers were beginning to overlap but said certain types of business would help the center, a bank for instance; he was also nostalgic for former businesses, Bow and Bowl and Ben Franklin 5 & 10, and could see an old-fashioned hardware store doing well here.

Kastner challenged a statement made earlier by Mach that the city should not be in the position of choosing tenants, asking “is it any better now, that Christakos chooses the tenants?” By making the center a historic district, she said, it would be eligible for grants from federal, state and county sources.

Ivy said he got nostalgic for the Bow and Bowl, too. He indicated Roosevelt Center doesn’t have a big draw but at the same time he doesn’t want it to be Beltway Plaza.

Davis remembered when the term “Center Bum” was a term of endearment, suggesting that is no longer the case. She said dealing with the homeless is not the city’s job, rather the county’s. Formerly a group of men who took morning coffee at the Center called themselves “Center Bums.”

Mach was in favor of enhancing security and keeping the center clean and beautiful and trying to screen the trash in the back of the buildings.

Herling spoke for the city doing something positive for the homeless – in fact it has an obligation to do so.

Question 4: “How would you like Roosevelt Center to look in the future, in light of the recent charrette? What kind of redevelopment efforts do you support?”

Roberts didn’t think the students spent enough time in Greenbelt.

Kastner said, “We need to reconsider the idea of a historic district,” and added that work and funding for a homeless center should come through a third party.

Ivy didn’t want the center to change at all; if the New Deal Café went away that would be a shame but “its not the city’s responsibility to make businesses viable.”

Davis liked the idea of entrance ways, possibly residences at the center, more lights and a commercially viable business in the old post office space.

Mach thought the charrette was very exciting but many people were not from Greenbelt and “they don’t realize the city has no planning or zoning authority.” She wasn’t in favor of high-rises nor business in the parking lots nor services for the homeless in the area.

Herling asked that ideas of those from outside Greenbelt not be automatically dismissed and suggested that many would like to remove the red brick buildings and put some art deco condos in their place.

Question 5: “What role should the city play in marketing of the Roosevelt Center?”

Roberts said that “stability is the key,” citing the dry cleaners, the co-op, convenience store and credit union as long-term tenants that make the Center stable, and reinforced his view that the Center is a beautiful space.

Kastner agreed that bringing planning and zoning offices into the Center is a great idea and also suggested awards for socially-conscious businesses that come to the Center.

Ivy was against any outside marketing director, instead advocating “tapping into our own resources,” meaning local Greenbelters.

Davis congratulated the RCMA for having regular meetings and indicated that the county brings potential business partners to them. She mentioned a vegetarian restaurant and was in favor of some kind of experienced marketing expert.

Mach said the city has done a very good job marketing, citing the website and suggesting brochures about Greenbelt be placed at major highway rest stops to inform travelers of historic Greenbelt as well as creating better signage at the Center entrance.

Herling said that 20 to 25 percent of the recreation department budget is for marketing and that the status quo is unacceptable.

After two hours, Peter May, president of the New Deal Café, asked, “What do you see if the New Deal closes?”

Roberts offered to build them a new stove hood and help install a range so they could have a functioning kitchen.

Kastner mentioned her volunteering at the New Deal and suggested better outreach to take advantage of improvements.

Ivy said he hopes it works out but the New Deal has had some management problems and he’s not sure what the city could do.

Davis said if it closes, “we would lose a funky place we have all gotten used to but the city is not going to bail you out, so good luck with your loan.”

Mach said it would be a terrible impact on the Center and the lack of funds is distressing and she hoped they get the loan they are applying for.

Herling suggested the food has improved and now it comes down to marketing and “can we build critical mass?”

ONE GREENBELT

Preserve, Maintain, and Enhance Our Assets.

In order to preserve our city's greatest assets and legacies: Roosevelt Center, the Greenbelt Lake, and our open space and woods, we must be more creative, and act with a greater sense of purpose. For example, I propose that the City, in conjunction with other public and private sector parties, create a private economic development corporation to operate the Roosevelt Center. The city should also seek designation as an Arts District.

We need to move with purpose regarding the Greenbelt Lake study (while not forgetting the lake in Greenbelt East) and take action addressing the deteriorating condition of the lakes. Regarding our treasured woods, our council has acted wisely in adopting the Forest Preserve Task Force report and in creating a new Forest Preserve Advisory Board.

We should explore more fully the means to raise revenues without raising taxes through careful planning, commitment, and focus to bring together public/private partnerships, greater collaboration with other jurisdictions, and opportunities for grants and other contributions.

Build a More Inclusive Community.

We must address the issues that confront us as one community, one Greenbelt, a city where we connect with our legacy, our future, and with each other. We can no longer respond to problems in one sector as a "Greenbelt Center" problem, or the crime in Springhill Lake as only affecting the 7,000 or so people who live there. Nor can we consider how unsafe it is for pedestrians to cross Hanover Parkway from the Post Office to the Greenway Center, as only a Greenbelt East issue.

Public safety, improving transportation, affordable housing, preserving our gems, and improving our public schools, are issues which affect every Greenbelter, every neighbor, regardless of where one lives in our 6.2 square mile jurisdiction. The key is to apply the original Greenbelt planning principles across the entire town.

Plan Together for Our Future.

Being an inclusive community also means providing opportunities for everyone to have a "plate at the table" for discussion and policy making. I am committed to being a good listener to all viewpoints. The charrette that I've proposed for Greenbelt West (see Greenbelt News Review, October 11, 2007 issue) would be an inclusive experience for all Greenbelters, regardless of viewpoint, and inclusive of Springhill Lake residents whose lives will be directly affected.

We want to build a community for families that incorporates Greenbelt planning principles, including affordable housing, effective intra-city transportation, and incorporate recommendations from the Greener Greenbelt initiative. We should pursue development of a "Green Zone" for businesses specializing in environmental research. Together, if we can help manage the growth, and provide our inclusive version of the future Greenbelt to County and State planners, we proactively move this process forward in the right direction.

My Commitment is to Build One Greenbelt—A Greater Greenbelt

That's why I'm running for City Council. That's why I want your vote.
